Kelsey works in the professional services practice group, which focuses on medical malpractice and professional liability defense. She also works on insurance coverage and defense issues and in the firm's commercial litigation group.

Kelsey graduated from the University of Maine School of Law in 2023, cum laude and earned a certificate in Information Privacy Law with distinction. While in law school, Kelsey was a managing editor of the Maine Law Review and co-founded the Student Journal of Information Privacy Law. She is published in both journals and participated in multiple moot court competitions. Kelsey was a summer associate at Norman, Hanson & DeTroy and served as a judicial extern to Magistrate Judge Karen Frink Wolf in the Federal District Court for the District of Maine.

Kelsey grew up on the north shore of Massachusetts and has loved living in Maine since 2018. She currently lives in South Portland and in her spare time practices yoga and enjoys hiking.
