Matthew Mehalic focuses his work on insurance related matters, including, but not limited to, first party claim investigation, coverage analysis, defense, and subrogation matters. His practice also involves diverse matters arising in general negligence, premises liability, product liability, contract disputes, construction, and trespass.

Matthew's clients value the degree of scrutiny that he brings to all inquiries, his due diligence, special investigation, and equal attention to both complex and simple matters.

Prior to attending and graduating from the University of Maine School of Law, Matthew trained as an archeologist and anthropologist at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.
