Rowan is an associate in NHD's Governmental relations practice group, focusing on achieving legislative victories for clients on a wide number of topics. He is also a part of NHD's litigation Practice Group, focusing on personal injury cases.

Prior to joining the firm, Rowan clerked for Justice Andrew Mead of the Maine Supreme Court. He graduated from the University of Maine School of Law in 2025, earning Magna Cum Laude honors and receiving the Pro Bono award. During law school, Rowan worked as a student attorney for the Cumberland Legal Aid Clinic's Youth Justice program, served as a summer associate with NHD, externed for Chief Judge John D. Levy of the Federal District Court of Maine, and interned with Judge Jack Panella of the Pennsylvania Superior Court.

Prior to law school, Rowan attended Mount Allison University in New Brunswick, Canada, where he studied international relations and earned the University's Scholar Athlete award in recognition of his academic achievements while playing Offensive Line for the University's football team.

Rowan resides in Portland with his fiancée and his wirehaired pointing griffon. In his free time, Rowan enjoys cooking, hunting, fishing, and watching old movies.
